Mokena Board Passes Sewer Resolution

PUBLIC HEARING ON $31,000 IMPROVEMENT PROJECT WILL BE HELD AT SCHOOL MAY 15

The first step in the improvement program for Mokena was taken Wednesday evening when the Mokena Local Board of Improvements adopted a resolution as prepared by the village engineers, Kelker De Leue, which calls for the laying of a sewer system down Front street west to Wolf Road thence north on Wolf road to the Marti creek at an estimated cost of $31,000, said cost to be met by special assessments to be spread over a ten year period.

Every piece of property in the village with the exception of the south side will be assessed to pay for this improvement. The assessments will range from $1.75 a front foot to 40 cents a foot according to location of the property.

The sewer tile will start at the east end of Front street with an 8 inch tile and the size of the tile is to be increased at certain lengths of the sewer system so that when the end is reached the outlet will be thru a 30 inch tile.

A public hearing will be held at the old Mokena school house the Wednesday evening, May 15th at 7 o'clock at which time all property owners who will be affected by the proposed improvement are invited to appear and file their objections if they have any. The proposed improvement is the biggest project that the village yet has undertaken to put thru. Those wishing to file objections may do so in person or thru an attorney.

New Lenox Lions Sponsor Cleanup

The New Lenox Lions Club is showing a real active community spirit. Last Monday they engaged a truck and collected all the rubbish from the various premises in the village and had it hauled away. The club paid all expenses totaling about $25.

The club meets twice a month. One meeting is held at Boy Scout Cabin in the Camp Grounds while the other meeting is usually a social affair, a luncheon being served by the ladies of the M. E. church in the church parlors.

Chicago Men Take Over Pete's Place

Peter Michelsen has rented his lunch room and oil filling station on Wolf road south of Mokena to Maesterdt and Toilliois of Chicago who will hold a grand opening on Saturday and Sunday, April 27 and 28.

Orland Stock Man Buys Noted Sire

Moore Watson Colantha 545254, a son of Sir Ollie Moore Watson 315127, a Grandson of Iowa Sir Ollie 114797, was recently purchased by John A. Klein of Orland from Chas. W. Wigglesworth, Barron, Wis. This future herd sire is a grandson of the famous show bull Iowa Sir Ollie, All American Grand Champion 1919, and who has thirty four A. R. O. daughters.

The dam of the bull Colantha Changeling Piebe 624246 under official test as a three year old produced 27,980 lbs., and 1164 lbs., of butter for 365 days. She is again on test and her new record will surpass the old both in milk and butter production.

This two year old bull is backed by one hundred twenty seven A. R. O. cows in the past five generations on both sides.

The herd which this sire will head is composed of 23 head of two year old heifers all of which are from advanced registered cows and sired by some very famous bulls, Ormsby Sensation 11th, Sir Korn-dyke DeKol Rue, Sir Segis Pontiac Wickfield, King Ormsby Segis Earl, and Highwood King Segis.

Among these heifers are three which were entered in the Wisconsin Dairy Show and received first award as junior yearlings. These heifers were sired by the famous bull, Pabst King Orchid 415059.

Set Your Clock An Hour Ahead

Well, the good old summer time is in the offing for daylight saving time is with us again or will be by Sunday morning. Be sure and set your clock one hour ahead.

Extend Gas Service

The Elmore subdivisions to the south and north of Tinley Park are developing fast. It is said that fully 75 new families will have located here by next Fall. Eight lots are reported sold in the new north side subdivision, formerly the Fulton farm. The Public Service Company is extending its gas service to the new properties. Streets are being graded and stoned and cement sidewalks are to be laid.

The Town Doctor

SAYS

KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR TOURIST TRAFFIC

There has been a great deal written and said about the value of automobile tourists. Not all of it has been correct, since much of it has been more or less guess work and the personal opinion of groups promoting highway routes and trails and publishers of books in which advertising is the main issue. In many cases the data given out is somewhat out of line, but be that as it may, the truth is nearer their figure than the realization on the part of most towns of what the actual value really is.

A check of automobile tourist traffic in practically every corner of the country shows an average of three and a half persons per car; the average daily expenditure for not less than ten-day trips to be over $17 an average of 250 miles daily, covering seventeen cities and towns; and that less than 20 per cent of the traffic are "Tin Can Tourists"—those who live in camps and travel in what may be termed second class.

Average expenditures will show: Gasoline allowing 250 miles, 15 miles to a gallon $\frac{1}{2}$ 16c, \$2.75; oil—average of 3 pints per day @30c a quart, 45c; automobile incidentals including storage, 50c; meals, bkf. 50c lunch 50c; dinner \$1.00, \$7.00; lodging—average of \$1.50 per person \$5.25; incidentals \$1.75; total of \$17.70.

This does not allow for unforeseen expenses, but does include possible tire and mechanical upkeep, tips, a soda or sandwich now and then, and the usual "Having a Swell Time" to the folks back home.

On this basis, the potential cash value of each tourist car (a car more than 100 miles away from its home garage) is $1.04 to each of the towns thru which it passes.

There are few towns of 40,000 population and many with less, that do not now have an average traffic of 25,000 cars per week (3572 per day or 223 per hour for 16 hours a day—less than two cars each way per minute, and motor traffic will increase yearly.

Twenty-five thousand tourist cars enroute spend $442,000 in seventeen towns per week, or $26,000 per town. A business house with an annual business equal to this would be something to talk about.

Every town has a chance at this business. It may not be $3,714 per day, but one-fifth that much is something to go after.

The live business corporation also knows the amount of traffic that passes thru the town the same as any live merchant knows the number of people that pass his store. No town or business can tell if they are getting their share of business to be had if they do not know this.

The cash value of tourist or motor traffic is great enough to warrant concerted action and expenditures of goodly sums to get it, but there is more: Twenty per cent of the out-of-state motor traffic is in the market for, or can be sold, a new location. Good roads have widened the farmers' range of marketing at a profit and have broadened opportunities for the employment of labor, but too few towns and cities have capitalized on it.

Mokena Wins 4 to 0

Tuesday afternoon on a soggy diamond, the Mokena school baseball team defeated the Orland school team by the pleasing score of 4 to 0. The batteries were Homerding and Brown for Mokena and Wagner, Uthe and Hern for Orland.

Mokena's first two runs came in the second inning when Homerding walked, stole second, and advanced to third on Hern's sacrifice. Walsh, batting next, reached first on an error, and Homerding scored. A stolen base and an overthrow advanced Walsh to third, and he scored on McGovney's grounder to Wagner, who threw to first instead of trying to shut off the run at home. This ended the scoring until the sixth, when Mokena's four singles in succession, followed by a base on balls, added two more runs and filled the bases. Things looked pretty bad for Orland about that time, but Uthe relieved Wagner as pitcher, was on the starting end of a double play from home to third, and then retired the side by a strike out. Again in the eighth Mokena threatened, with bases full, and one down, but again Uthe rallied and started another of those double plays from home to third, retiring the side after three scorings without a man having crossed the plate.

On the defensive side, Mokena played almost perfect ball. "Paddy" allowed two hits, each coming without a man on base, gave two bases on balls, and hit two men. As if this sort of thing made him mad, he retaliated by striking out 19 men. All this, coupled with one error, two over throws, and a passed ball ended the story. Orland threatened but once when Wagner attempted to score on Brown's overthrow at 3rd in the fourth inning, but Muff coming in from center field relayed the ball to Homerding who passed in on to Brown, and Wagner was tagged he slid onto the plate.

Mokena's substitutions in the game were Willie Muehler for Walter Muehler, and Beagley for Cannel. Orland played the same men thru-out the game, interchanging only Uthe and Wagner.

The lineup was as follows: Mokena—Brown, Marti, Muff, Homerding, Hern, Walsh, McGovney, Cannel, Walter Muehler, subs. Willie Muehler, Beagley. Orland—Scott, Hughes, Cure, Wagner, Flonder, Franks, Uthe, Heim, Newcomb.

Tinley Garden Club Notes

The Tinley Park Garden Club gathered at the home of Mrs. A. C. Koehler Friday evening. Despite the pouring rain, there was a large attendance.

The club has concluded its annual election of officers. Upon the capable shoulders of Mrs. K. Hug have fallen the presidential responsibilities, while Mrs. J. C. Funk as vice-president will offer her aid and assistance. Mrs. Edmund Moss is secretary and Mrs. John Boeyer is treasurer.

The executive board will get together at a special meeting to appoint standing committees.

Mrs. Wm. Funk served as president since the organization of the club and has been actively interested in its progress. Her inexhaustible enthusiasm and competency formed a strong foundation on which the club may flourish. The success of the club since its formation a little over a year ago have been satisfying and inspirational. All members are going forward in the new year with renewed outlook and energy.

The date of the flower show has been set for August 23rd and 24th.

Mrs. Wm. Funk had another delightful surprise and presented each member with some castor bean seeds. Everyone was happy to get them. The members also had a surprise for their outgoing president, Mrs. Funk, in the form of a beautiful piece of Rockwood pottery containing red roses and pink snapdragons.

The next regular meeting will be with Mrs. Chas. Nielsen, on May 17.

R.I. Starts Accident Prevention Drive

With the announced determination on January 1, to cut accidents among employees by one-half during 1929, as compared with last year, the Safety Department of the Rock Island Lines through Vice-President L. C. Fritch, has issued a statement showing an average reduction of 19.9 per cent in injuries during Feb. of this year, compared with January. This report has given the Safety Campaign on the railroad a big impetus and has aroused employees all over the system in an effort to exceed the mark set on the first of the year. The record covers all classes of employees, aggregating nearly 40,000 over the entire system of 8000 miles on fourteen divisions.

In commenting on the new Safety Campaign of the Rock Island, Vice-President Fritch says: "The Rock Island will not open its doors to thoughtless, careless, nor indifferent applicants for admission into its service, and present employees are expected to respond quickly and wholeheartedly to our call for better and safer practices."

"Employees must be instructed by their supervisory officers that safety is of first consideration and that to enter the service is an assurance on their part to 'Prevent Injury', to themselves and to others. Older employees must perform their work carefully and safely, thus setting a good example for the newcomer."

Under the present program of the Safety Department of the Rock Island, 120 employees Safety Committees have been formed, headed by District and Division officers, and competitive Safety Bulletin Boards have been installed to keep all employees advised of the progress of the Campaign.

"It Was a Famous Victory"

Col. Tarleton

Cowpens Battlefield Marker

Col. Morgan

Col. John E. Howard

Col. Pickens

Col. William Washington

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE of the last acts of the closing session of the Seventieth congress was to pass a bill providing for the erection of a national monument on the Cowpens battlefield in South Carolina. When this monument is erected, tardy recognition will be given to a "famous victory," one which is perhaps little known to most Americans but which was one of the most important of all the Revolutionary conflicts. The story of the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, the crowning event of the Revolution, is known to all, but Yorktown might not have been possible had it not been for two earlier victories. One of them took place at Kings Mountain, when the frontiersmen of North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia overwhelmed the British leader Ferguson, and the other was the battle of Cowpens.

In connection with the action of congress providing for the Cowpens national monument the historical section of the army war college prepared a "historical statement," printed as a house document, which gives by far the best account of this battle that has yet been written. The importance of that battle is shown in the following statement from the document:

Tarleton (leader of the British at Cowpens) in his narrative, commenting on the two disasters which the British suffered in South Carolina, said that the fall of Ferguson at Kings Mountain was a catastrophe which put an end to the first expedition into North Carolina and that the battle of Cowpens overshadowed the commencement of the second expedition. This comment, taken in conjunction with the apprehension of George Washington that "the Southern states will look upon this victory as much more decisive in its consequences than it really is," briefly summarizes the result of the battle of Cowpens. The effect at the time was to hearten greatly the patriotic cause and to distress the British army and their Tory sympathizers beyond measure. It was the second link in the chain of events soon to be followed by others, which finally led to the surrender of Cornwallis' army at Yorktown.

To have a proper understanding of this battle and its importance it is necessary to take into account the military situation in the South and some of the previous events. Briefly, these were as follows:

Following the capitulation of Charlestown on May 12, 1780, all of South Carolina was in a condition of subjugation within a few months, and in September, British headquarters were moved to Charlotte Town, N. C. Prior to this Lieutenant Colonel Ferguson had been detached with a small force of provincials to organize the militia and operate on Cornwallis' flank. On the seventh of October his entire command was lost at Kings Mountain. Following this disaster the British field army was withdrawn more than sixty miles to Wynneshorough and there remained on the defensive while awaiting information relative to the rehabilitation of Gates' army (which had suffered a disastrous defeat at Camden on August 16) now commanded by Greene.

Lieutenant Colonel Tarleton, the only officer remaining after Ferguson's death, used by Cornwallis for the command of roving troops, was sent into the district north of Ninety-Six to oppose General Morgan, and somewhat later Cornwallis resumed his march northward. Tarleton and Morgan met at Cowpens on the seventeenth of January and in a battle noted for the unusual tactics adopted by the Americans the British were defeated with heavy losses by a force inferior in numbers, a considerable portion of which was militia.

Cornwallis hoped to destroy or drive out of South Carolina the corps commanded by General Morgan. . . . There was also hope that by rapid marches the British main army would get between Greene and Virginia and by that means force the Americans to fight without receiving any reinforcements from that state or, failing in this, to oblige Greene to quit North Carolina with precipitation and thereby encourage the friends of the Crown to make good their promises of a general rising to assist the British commander in re-establishing the royal government.

Morgan's purpose had been to harass Cornwallis' foraging and scouting parties and being more than a hundred miles away from Greene at the time, Cornwallis believed that Tarleton could crush Morgan before Greene could come to his aid. Morgan knew that Tarleton was coming after him but he had no intention of engaging in a battle until he could do so on ground of his own choosing.

The place where General Morgan established his camp the night of the sixteenth was near the intersection of the Mill Gap road and the road from the present city of Spartanburg running northeast into North Carolina and crossing the Broad river at Island Ford. . . . The position selected for the action lay on both sides of the Mill Gap road on both sides of the camp. The ground is slightly undulating and at the time was covered with trees of red oak, hickory and pine. Being used for the grazing of cattle there was but little if any underbrush. Two very slight elevations topped the ridge along which the Mill Gap road runs and these were selected as lines of development for the American troops.

The main position was on the elevation just south of the ravine in which camp was established. To its front for 300 yards there is a scarcely perceptible slope downwards; beyond this the slope is greater, dropping off into a shallow ravine 700 yards from the main position. To the rear of the main position and just west of the camp site is an elevation slightly higher than that of the main position. This ridge continues across the road in a south and southwest direction but at a slightly less elevation. From either side the terrain between the two was visible under and through the trees. The ground offered no cover for either the attack or the defense except such as was furnished by the trees. The flanks of both armies were exposed as the terrain was favorable in all directions for the operations of mounted troops. The ravine in which Morgan camped and one on the opposite side of the road offered but little interference with the movement of foot or mounted troops.

Morgan's plan of battle was to use the Maryland Continentals and the Virginia militia (of equal worth to the Continentals as many had served in previous campaigns) in his main position on the summit of the southernmost ridge and astride the Mill Gap road. Washington's dragoons to the number of 80, augmented by the 45 militia under McCall, were the main reserve posted in the rear of the northernmost ridge where ground cover was sufficient to protect them from hostile observation and fire and sufficiently near "as to be able to charge the enemy should they be broken." The militia were to form an interrupted line on the flanks in front, which position was to be held only temporarily, when they were to withdraw and reform on the flanks of the main position after reorganization had been effected and lend what assistance they could as an additional reserve.

At this time Howard's Maryland and Delaware Continentals consisted of 237 men. They were placed on the left of the line, astride the Mill Gap road. To their right were Captain Beatie's and Major Triplett's companies of Virginia militia, under the command of the latter and totaling about 100 men. Captains Tate and Buchanan, with about 100 of the Augusta riflemen of Virginia, supported the right of the line. In the advanced position, which was to be abandoned early in the fight, were about 308 militia from North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, under Colonel Pickens. These troops were situated to guard the flanks. Major McDowell of the North Carolina volunteers was posted on the right flank, 150 yards in front of Howard's line. Major Cunningham of the Georgia volunteers was on the left flank at the same distance in front of Howard's line. To the right of Major McDowell were posted the South Carolina volunteers under Colonels Brannon and Thomas. To the left of Major Cunningham was posted the remainder of the South Carolina militia under Colonel Hayes and Major Hammond. The latter commanded Major McCall's regiment, he being with Colonel Washington.

From Pickens' line of militia small parties of riflemen were sent 150 yards farther to the front to skirmish with the enemy. McDowell commanded those in the right sector of the skirmish line and Cunningham, those in the left sector. Patrols covered the front and flanks to give warning of Tarleton's approach.

Tarleton broke camp at 3 o'clock in the morning, determined to engage the Americans before they could cross the Broad or in case they made an early march and continued their withdrawal to strike them when astride the river.

When the British commander saw the disposition of Morgan's troops he was delighted for he believed that he could make short work of them. He had a force of about 1,000 men and although he believed that Morgan's force totaled less than 1,920, he felt that he could ignore the value of the 1,000 militia and 300 backwoodsmen in Morgan's army and make a quick job of the 500 Continentals and 120 cavalry. Deploying his troops along the line of Morgan's front he moved to the attack at about eight o'clock. Driving in the front line skirmishes under Cunningham and McDowell, from whose fire Tarleton's infantry had suffered but little, he advanced against Pickens' line of militia which kept up a fire by regiments for a short time and then, according to their orders, retreated. The British line had still suffered but little as it approached the Continentals and Virginians under Howard. As Howard's men opened fire the British advance was temporarily checked. At this moment, Tarleton sent the two troops of dragoons, which he had posted on each end of his line to guard his flanks, into action. He now had about 750 infantry in line, supported by two guns (three-pounders) and was opposed by less than 450 infantry in Howard's line. The militia which had withdrawn to the flanks of Howard's line had not yet reformed and it was doubtful at the moment whether they would be of any use. Tarleton's dragoons charged upon them and were cutting them down when Washington counter-charged with his cavalry on the left of Howard's line and relieved the pressure there somewhat.

It became evident to Howard that when Tarleton should bring his reserves into action his exposed right flank might be thrown into confusion and he ordered the flank company to change front to the right. His orders were misunderstood and this company began to retreat. The officers along Howard's line, seeing this, and supposing that orders had been given for a retreat, faced their men about and began to retire. Morgan, who was engaged in reforming the militia, was surprised to see his Continentals, who had fought so valiantly at Camden, in apparent retreat. He quickly rode over to Howard. "What are you retreating for?" he shouted. "Simply a change of position to protect my right flank," replied Howard. "Are you beaten?" asked Morgan. Pointing to his men, Howard said, "Men who are retreating in that order are not beaten."

Morgan then ordered Howard to continue his retreating movement until he reached the rising ground in the rear and then rode back to select the position where they were to make their stand. The British, seeing this movement and believing victory within their grasp, pressed forward with fixed bayonets. Tarleton's cavalry was ordered to charge. By this time not more than thirty yards separated the "retreating" Americans and the victory-flushed redcoats. Suddenly Howard gave a sharp order. His men wheeled right-about face and from their guns poured a sheet of flame which stopped the British in their tracks and threw them into great confusion. Howard then gave the order "Charge bayonets!" Back over the ground which they had just crossed swept Howard's Marylanders. Like a thunderbolt Washington's cavalry dashed down upon them. The panic which caught the British infantry spread to Tarleton's dragoons and a general flight followed. Tarleton tried in vain to rally his men but it was useless. Within twenty minutes after the battle began it was over and the British were completely defeated. Tarleton had suffered a loss of 110 killed, 200 wounded, and 531 taken prisoner. The American loss was slight—12 killed and 60 wounded. The spoils of their victory amounted to 2 standards, 2 cannon, 800 stands of arms, 100 dragoon horses and 35 wagons.

"It appeared to the British when Howard's line fell back," writes the army war college historian, "that victory was at hand and so it would have been had the line been composed of men less injured to battle than were the Continentals of Maryland and Delaware. There was no delay or hesitation when the order to halt, face the enemy and fire, was given, and there then occurred in a moment a scene of dumbfounded surprise, confusion and panic seldom witnessed in battle. The outcome resulted in one of the most gloriously unexpected victories of the Revolutionary war."

As a result of this brilliant victory, Morgan and his men were given the thanks of the United States "for their fortitude and good conduct displayed in the action at Cowpens" under a resolution of congress, March 9, 1781. The resolutions further provided that a gold medal be presented to General Morgan; silver medals to Colonels Washington and Howard and a sword to Colonel Pickens.

Tarleton, in his report to Cornwallis, attributed his defeat "to the bravery or good conduct of the Americans; to the loose manner of forming which had always been practiced by the King's troops in America; or to some unforeseen event, which may throw terror into the most disciplined soldiers or counteract the best-concerted designs." Whatever the reason, however, it was a crippling blow to Cornwallis, for the victory of Cowpens had deprived him of his most effective light infantry and, as later events proved, it led eventually to his downfall. On January 19 Cornwallis started in pursuit of Morgan to cut him off from joining Greene and, if possible, to recapture Morgan's prisoners. By a superb march Morgan eluded him and joined Greene in North Carolina. Then followed the masterly series of maneuvers by the "Rhode Island blacksmith" (Greene) which ended in the battle of Guilford Court House and finally forced Cornwallis to retreat into Virginia. He took his position at Yorktown. Washington completely deceived the British in the North as to his future plans, marched South, swooped down upon Cornwallis—and the rest is history!

Lesson for April 28

THE SUFFERING SERVANT OF JEHOVAH

LESSON TEXT—Isa. 52:13-53:12
GOLDEN TEXT—With his stripes we are healed.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Love for Us.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Love for Us.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Salvation Cost.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Suffering Savior.

This prophecy is the grand center of the Old Testament. The bond servant of Jehovah with great wisdom gloriously executes the divine purpose at the cost of great suffering.

I. The Servant's Triumph (52:13-15).
By the servant here is meant the coming Messiah (42:1).

1. His wisdom (v. 13).
"He will deal prudently," for his name is "Counselor" (9:6). He was filled with the spirit of wisdom and understanding (11:2).

2. He shall be exalted (v. 13).
He was to be extolled and magnified because he was the "Mighty God" (9:6), even Immanuel. Because of Christ's devotion to His task of redemption, God has highly exalted Him and given Him a name which is above every name (Phil. 2:9).

3. The appearance of the Servant (v. 14).

Because of His marred "visage," He wholly disappointed the expectation of the carnal minds who looked for outward signs of royalty and worldly greatness. Jesus, as Jehovah's servant, was tortured and beaten by men as He went about doing the business committed to him.

4. The issue of His ministry (v. 15).
"He shall sprinkle many nations." This reveals Him as the great High Priest sprinkling the nations with His blood, cleansing them from their sins. Just as the people were astonished with the silence of Jesus in the midst of His shameful treatment, so shall the kings and great men of the earth be dumb before Him when the suffering Servant shall be exalted.

II. The Servant Despised and Rejected (53:1-3).

1. The unbelief of the Jews (v. 1).
(1) They disbelieved the words of the prophets.

(2) They did not recognize the hand of the Lord in the miracles and wonders which He wrought.

2. The origin of the Servant (v. 2).
He sprang out of the stump of Judaism. The sad condition of the people at that time is expressed by "dry corn."

3. The Man of Sorrows (v. 3).
He was afflicted and rejected.

III. The Vicarious Suffering of the Servant (53:4-6).

1. His griefs and sorrows were ours (v. 4). This awful suffering was looked upon by the world as occasioned by sin—"we did esteem Him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted."

2. He was beaten for us (v. 5). That which was our due was meted out to Him. Observe the words, "wounded," "bruised," "despised," "stripes"—how awful they picture His treatment, and yet "our" shows that His suffering was vicarious.

3. The reason for (v. 6).
All humanity, Jews and Gentiles, had gone astray. God laid upon Him the iniquity of us all.

IV. The Death of the Servant (53:7-9).

1. The strange silence (v. 7).
He opened not His mouth. He went as a lamb to the slaughter. "He answered them never a word, insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly" (Matt. 27:14).

2. Unconcern of multitude (v. 8).
They failed to discern the fact that He suffered in their stead.

3. Buried with the wicked and the rich (v. 9).

The prophecy was fulfilled in His crucifixion between two thieves and burial in Joseph's tomb.

V. The Servant's Ultimate Victory (vv. 10-12).

1. His sufferings expressed the divine will (v. 10).

The Lord Himself laid this burden upon Him, and through His sufferings the law was vindicated and redemption was accomplished.

2. A spiritual progeny resulted from His death (v. 10).

The fundamental law of the universe, which is life out of death, found supreme expression in His death on the cross (John 12:24).

3. Through death shall come to realization His fondest hope (v. 11).

He shall see the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied.

4. The divine reward (v. 12).
The divine Conqueror shall snare the spoils of victory.

He Bares Our Sicknesses

When the even was come, they brought unto Him many that were possessed with devils; and He cast out the spirits with His word, and healed all that were sick; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.—Matthew 8:16, 17.

Possible With God

The things which are impossible with men are possible with God.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois Press Association.

Night committee meetings of the legislature are now being held in an attempt to clear up the vast amount of work before them.

Senator Adolph Marks, Chicago, has introduced ten bills which have to do with Chicago elections. Senator Marks plans to do away with election frauds in Chicago.

Existence of all public dance halls outside city limits in Illinois is threatened by a bill offered the legislature by Senator Charles Baker, Monroe Center.

Peoria and Saline counties are officially accredited as free from bovine tuberculosis, according to an announcement issued by the Illinois department of agriculture.

Representative George W. Blackwell, Chicago, has introduced a bill which would compel unincorporated firms to publish the names of persons in the firm.

A bill offered by Senator Martin R. Carlson, Moline, at the suggestion of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, gives the state auditor authority to look into the affairs of all counties of the state.

The senate has passed a bill introduced by Senator Earl B. Searcy, Springfield, appropriating $150,000 to the secretary of state for the improvement of the tunnel from the state power house and making necessary connections with the Centennial building.

Illinois winter wheat condition is reported favorable and loss of acreage from winter killing is small with few exceptions due to flood damage, according to the April joint report of the Illinois and federal departments of agriculture.

Protection of more than 300,000 acres of woodlands in southern Illinois from forest fire is one of the principal tasks confronting Illinois foresters, R. B. Miller, chief forester of the state department of conservation, said in commenting on the observance of Conservation week.

Increased efforts to guard the food supplies of Illinois against impurities, misrepresentation and insanitary conditions are apparent in the March report of Walter R. Kinzey, superintendent of the division of foods and dairies. More than 9,000 inspections were made.

Better housing is one of the big needs of Illinois farm poultry flocks, but there is no such thing as a one best house for all conditions, according to a new circular, "Housing Farm Poultry," just issued by the college of agriculture at the University of Illinois, for the benefit of the poultrymen and other interested persons.

Correctional procedure, from the arrest of the individual to his final release from parole, should be a carefully co-ordinated and studied humanitarian process, Rodney H. Brandon, director of the state department of public welfare, told members of the Illinois Probation Officers' society at their convention in Springfield recently.

Director Garrett DeF. Kinney of the state department of finance has asked for $90,000 for remodeling and redecorating the executive mansion in his biennial budget. This sum was recommended by State Architect Herick Hammond, Senator George M. Reynolds, Utica, and Representative C. A. Bruer, Pontiac, as a committee of three which recently inspected the mansion.

Hopes of administration leaders for a short session of the legislature seem to have vanished. Such a flood of bills have been introduced in both branches that it will be practically impossible for either of them to adjourn before June 20. Governor Emmerson is still hoping, however, for sine die adjournment on May 20. The legislature cannot legally remain in session longer than June 30 unless called in special session.

Senator Richard J. Barr, Joliet, has introduced a resolution citing the increase in accidents at grade crossings and provides for the appointment of a commission to confer with the government, department of public works and buildings, division of highways, and commerce commission to determine whether present laws are adequate to require railroads to pay their share of costs of grade elimination.

The bill appropriating $1,482,710 for the adjutant general's biennial expenses, introduced by Homer J. Tice, Greenview, has passed the house and has been sent to the senate. The amount appropriated is $5,000 less than two years ago.

The bill introduced by Representative Arthur Roe, Vandalia, appropriating $8,865.11 to reimburse Fayette county for prosecuting persons for escaping from the Vandalia state farm, has passed the house and has been sent to the senate.

Representative Frank McCarthy, Elgin, has offered a resolution endorsing the Chicago World's Fair for 1933.

Representative J. W. Harris, Chicago, has introduced a bill which prevents the charging of interest in advance.

By a vote of 32 to 0 the senate concurred on house amendments to Governor Emmerson's ballot law amendments and the measures have gone to the governor for his approval.

Representative Calvin T. Weeks, Chicago, has introduced a bill increasing school taxes for Chicago from 90 cents on the $100 valuation to $1.47 for the year 1929.

Vegetation is two weeks earlier than normal due to the unusually high temperatures, the crop report issued by the United States weather bureau states.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson will lay the cornerstone for the new $450,000 Masonic cathedral in Moline on May 24. Governor Emmerson is grand master of Illinois Masons.

Illinois has the smallest auto license fee of any state in the union and it is also admitted to have the best and most miles of concrete roads. For example, the average auto license in Illinois is $9.71, in Pennsylvania $30, in Oregon $43.70, and in Florida $45.86.

The bill introduced by Representative T. J. Sullivan, Springfield, permitting an increase in Springfield's bonding power from 2½ cents on the $100 valuation to 5 cents, to open the way for the construction of Lake Springfield, has passed the house and has been sent to the senate for action.

Calling attention to the interest shown by Indiana and Ohio in the national memorial of George Rogers Clark, Christopher B. Coleman, executive secretary of the George Rogers Clark Sesquicentennial, commission, has expressed the hope that Illinois will also take some part in the work.

Twenty-five thousand human lives are wasted annually through the ravages of various diseases in Illinois. Dr. Andy Hall, director of the state department of public health, said in a statement he issued supporting state wide observation of Conservation week.

By unanimous vote the house has adopted a joint resolution by Representative Homer J. Tice, Greenview, providing for the appointment of a state commission of 21 members to decide upon a suitable location for a memorial to Abraham Lincoln. The resolution was presented by Senator Norman G. Flagg, Moro. Both legislators have been very active in Lincoln movements.

In a resolution, offered by Representative William E. King, Chicago, President Hoover is called upon by the house of representatives to have his prohibition law enforcement commission widen the scope of its investigation to take in conditions surrounding the enforcement of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments to the Federal Constitution. They were passed after the Civil war to aid in the emancipation of the negro.

The house committee has provided funds for three state armories. The three allowed were reduced materially after conferences. The Decatur appropriation was reduced from $275,000 to $225,000, and the appropriation for the Cairo building was reduced from $225,000 to $200,000. The Naval Reserves, Chicago, were given $165,000 for a building. The rest of the armory bills may die in the subcommittees.

V. Y. Dallman, editor of the Illinois State Register, Springfield, Ill., had the following to say about Speaker of the House David E. Shanahan in a recent editorial:

"Mr. Speaker
"The above salutation has fallen upon the ears of a number of distinguished men of Illinois but upon the ears of no man in the state who has been a more ideal speaker of the house of representatives than David E. Shanahan.

"Elected to the Illinois general assembly in 1894—35 years ago—he has served continuously since that time and is assured of repeated re-election just as long as he desires to continue legislative service. Though a Republican in politics, Speaker Shanahan is not governed by partisanship in his direction of the legislative activities of the house. He is absolutely fair and impartial. That he has been ill recently in a Chicago hospital and unable to attend to his legislative responsibilities is a source of regret throughout the state."

A bill by the late Mrs. Flora Cheney, Chicago, creating a state commission to make a study of all election laws, has been reported out of the house committee on elections with the recommendation that it pass. The bill had the support of election officials of Chicago and downstate.

A bill to raise the tax rate of cities under 150,000 population from 66½ cents to $1 on the $100 valuation for five years, beginning in 1929, has been introduced in the house by Representative G. J. Johnson, Paxton.

MOKENA M. E. CHURCH NOTES
Harold Sandall, Pastor

Church school 10:30 a. m. Evening worship 7:00 p. m.

"The measure of the success of any Sunday school is in terms of Christian character and service". However, there are other agencies that help determine these processes. Our Sunday school gets but one hour out of a hundred and sixty-eight hours that make a week.

Mrs. Moriarty is again with her class after she and her family have enjoyed several months in California. Mrs. Cooper substituted teaching her class during her absence.

The new class for boys, ranging from six to eight will meet next Sunday with Miss Virginia Wallace as their teacher.

Miss Myrtle Roberts will play a special piano solo for the opening exercises. Frances Sorenson and Jeanette Wallace are recruiting others to favor us with similar talent from time to time.

Sunday evening the pastor will preach on the topic "The returns from invested faith." Whatever may be your creed or station in life, as one of the Christian churches of the community we open our doors and invite you to our fellowship.

ST. JOHN'S EVAN. CHURCH

W. J. Cramer, Pastor
Sunday school 9:30 a. m. Divine service 10:30 a. m. Sunday school rally at Monee afternoon and evening.

Supper will be served to all the Sunday school workers. All who are interested in Sunday School work are urged to attend this rally. Rev. H. Lohans of Webster Groves, Mo., will be the speaker in the evening. Rev. Lohans is a teacher of religious education in our Theological Seminary and undoubtedly will bring a real message. Our Sunday school has increased wonderfully in attendance in the last month.

Quite a few new scholars have joined the classes in the primary department. We feel confident that in Mrs. E. P. Krapp we have a good leader again in the primary department and we urge all mothers who have not yet sent the beginners to send them. We are trying to work up our attendance to 200. Your pastor also kindly invites all adults to join his Bible class. It certainly is very inspiring to see so many take interest in our Sunday school. Our average attendance will even go over the 200 mark if all attend our Sunday school. A hearty invitation is extended to all.

Monday evening the last of the season's entertainments will be given. We had a packed house on both occasions and we are certain that the last of our entertainments will see another packed house. On Monday evening we will give the play "The Pullback." This play will be given by Mrs. Arthur Florence's class. On the screen we will show the picture "Forlorn River". The orchestra as usual under the direction of Frank Hirsch, Jr., will favor us with a number of beautiful selections. The program for Monday evening will outdo the other two. We have saved the best for the last. Don't fail to come to our entertainment. Doors are open at 7 p. m. The program commences promptly at 8 p. m.

Brotherhood meeting on Thursday May 2nd. All members of the Brotherhood are invited to attend.

The P. T. A., will hold a public card and bunco party at the Mokena school on the evening of May 2. The party will commence at eight o'clock and everyone is welcome.

Mrs. Gilbert Homering has returned from the Silver Cross hospital where she recently underwent an operation. She is improving nicely.

Mrs. A. E. Wachter slipped on a cellar step while carrying a pan of water down stairs to start the family washing last Tuesday morning and fell down into the basement. She was alone at the time of the accident. She was very badly bruised and suffered a deep gash on her right leg. She finally managed to get upstairs but was not able to summon aid as there is no telephone in the home. She suffered greatly until her little son Edward came home from school at noon and he secured aid for her. Mrs. Wachter has not been able to walk, but is improving nicely.

Harold, son of Albert Cappel underwent an operation at the Silver Cross hospital the past week for the removal of an abscess. He is home now and is doing nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gorham and son, Robert of Sun City, Florida have motored here and are visiting with Mrs. Gorham's mother, Mrs. Kate Cooper.

Mrs. Harvey Reab entertained the 500 club last Wednesday.

Mrs. Leggett of Chicago was a guest in the Harvey Reab home Wednesday.

CANADA'S TURKEY QUEEN

Before she became the "Turkey Queen," Mrs. W. A. Freeman of Ardenode, Alberta, lived in Wisconsin. A pair of bronze turkeys she won in a raffle became the nucleus of what is now the largest turkey farm in Canada. Last year she realized $8,000 from the turkeys. No incubators are used by Mrs. Freeman. The hatching is done by the birds themselves. She follows closely the advice given in the literature on turkey raising published by Dept. of Agriculture. (Herbert Photos.)

Canadian Industries

Pulp and paper represent the largest of the manufacturing industries in Canada. Flour and grist milling comes second, and the production of lumber and forest products stands third.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL FEMALE SKYSCRAPERS OF THE WORLD

There is something in the air above the clouds that develops beauty. Cosmetics and lotions make some women appear beautiful, but flying over the clouds with the purest ozone fanning the cheeks evidently is superior to any of the great number of beautifiers flooding the market. Nine different nations are represented by these nine women who are blessed, not only with daring, but with beauty and intelligence of the highest type. In the progress of aviation each one of the women shown here is doing for her country what many a man would not dare to do. The old idea that women were lacking in the nerve to do the things once attributed only to men has been shattered a long time ago. Today, there is scarcely a field once ruled over by men alone, that some daring woman has not entered. Each of the women pictured here is the foremost aviatrix of her country and the fame of each has spread to the four quarters of the world. Top row, left to right, Margot Soriano of Spain; Maryse Bastie of France; Thea Rasche of Germany. Center row, left to right, Lilly Dillens of Austria; Amelia Earhart of the United States; I. Yoneyama of Japan. Bottom row, left to right, Lady Heath of England; Lilly Goom, China; Mrs. Carl Florman, Sweden. (Herbert Photos, N. Y.)

CLEAN UP

"If the streets and alleys are filthy, the yards will be filthy. If the yards are filthy, the houses will be filthy. If the houses are filthy, the people will be filthy. If the people are filthy, they will be sickly and they won't care."

It is a positive fact that in communities where there is enough civic pride to keep the houses, lawns, backyards, alleys and streets in good and clean condition, there is much less opportunity for disease germs to find lodging. Cleanliness is the basis of all public health measures.

In addition to being more healthy, a clean city is more attractive to visitors. Companies looking for new locations for factories make sure that cities are clean and healthy for their employees.

The conditions of a house and the yard are usually a good index of the personal cleanliness of the family living there. The yard may be small or large and the house meagerly or beautifully furnished, if both are clean and neat, we can be fairly sure of finding a contented happy, clean family. Neglected premises and dirty houses usually go hand in hand with discontented, quarrelsome dirty families.

May 4, 1929 has been designated as "Screen and Clean Up Day" in Illinois. Might not this be a good day to start spring cleaning in the entire community? Vacant lots can be cleaned of all refuse, tin cans, boxes and other litter. Stagnant pools, refuse or manure piles might be reported to your Health Department. Such places as these breed flies and mosquitoes which are a menace to good health.

There are always more or less accumulations of dirt and refuse left after the snow and ice disappear. Such dirt if allowed to dry and blow around as dust will irritate the nose and throat and thus provide an opportunity for development of any infection which may be present. Colds often result from such conditions and as we all know neglected colds are often the forerunners of more serious conditions, especially pneumonia.

Clean up campaigns help to prevent sickness and fires. But do not forget that the healthy city should be clean all the year around. It safeguards the water supply. It protects the milk supply by pasteurization or by inspection and tuberculin testing of cattle. It disposes of the city's sewage so as not to endanger anyone's water supply. It cleans its streets regularly. Its residents do their part every day in the year.

Took Soda 20 Years for Gas-- Stops Now

"For 20 years I took soda for indigestion and stomach gas. One bottle of Adlerika brought me complete relief."—John B. Hardy.

Adlerika relieves gas and sour stomach at once. Acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel, it removes old waste matter you never thought was in your system. Let Adlerika give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleaning and see how good you feel! Overcomes constipation. Leading druggist, in Tinley Park by H. C. Vogt, Druggist.

SMART RAGLAN COAT

Ideal for general wear on cooler days is this raglan coat especially designed for the woman of more mature figure. The nonchalant effect of the raglan sleeves and loosely hanging back makes this model especially youthful in appearance. The fronts are underfaced and rolled with a collar which may be made with or without scarf-ends. For sports a durable tweed or kasha is just the thing, while for a more dressy coat with the scarf collar used, velvet or broadcloth are excellent fabrics to employ. The pattern provides a belt.

Pictorial Printed Pattern No. 4481, Sizes 35 to 51 bust. 50 cents.

Look in tomorrow's paper for an infant's coat and cap of unusually clever design.

Sea Superstitions

We are indebted to the seamen of antiquity for the belief that kingfishers cast a spell upon the deep, so that calm weather prevails during the "halcyon days," about the time of the winter solstice. Old salts object to the presence of a cat on board ship, because she "carries a gale in her tail."—Exchange.

Indians' Peace Pipe

The peace pipe of the North American Indians was a tobacco pipe with a stem of reed or painted wood about two feet and a half long, decorated with feathers, with a large bowl, usually of red soapstone. After a treaty was signed, the Indians filled the calumet, or peace pipe, with the best tobacco, and presented it to the representatives of the party with whom they entered into alliance, the Indians themselves smoking out of it afterward.—Exchange.

Great Writer's Idea

Solomon's proverbs, I think, have omitted to say that as the sore palate findeth grit, so an uneasy conscience heareth innuendoes.—George Eliot.

Record Emerald

The largest emerald known today is the Muzo stone; an uncut crystal, six-sided (as all emeralds are), about two inches long, of the same diameter, and weighing over 1,300 karats, more than nine ounces, and is owned by the duke of Devonshire.

"I'll do as you ask, mister; but before the fighting begins, if there is any, I want to see you a minute. If there's sure to be fighting, come back to me. I'll be near the first wagon."

"If it is possible, I'll do that," I agreed, glad to make any terms that would insure her safety.

There was some delay in starting, although the drums had pounded out the "long march." It seems that General Braddock wished to examine the Rush creek shore personally before breaking camp. Now my hopes were high again; but, alas! The precipitous banks impressed him as being too much of an obstacle to overcome now we were so close to the fort. And during the few minutes he walked along the banks and scowled at the rugged shore over the stream the fate of an army and of a continent were decided.

I felt a great regret that the ridge road was not followed, but I fully believed the river road would, at the most, cost some lives. It was not given to the Onondaga, nor even to the witch-girl, to read the next few hours.

It was near midday before we got in motion. Gist was already out with the Delawares. Round Paw, Cromit and I took to the woods together, but quickly separated and scouted toward Turtle creek. When we came back to camp that night we made the same report—no signs of any enemy Indians in numbers. Our Delawares had exchanged shots with a few French Indians but no scalps were brought in.

During the day the army had followed the valley of Long Run for a distance of about eight miles in a southwesterly course, so slowly did we move, and had made camp on the slope between the Monongahela and a rivulet called Crooked Run. Throughout the night the wagons kept coming in.

In the morning—July eighth—Colonel Washington arrived and insisted on exchanging the covered wagon for a horse. He showed his illness very plainly and was not fit to be in the saddle. He was a young man, younger than I, and yet his face was very grave. I saw him when he went to participate in a council with the commander and the field officers. I was waiting near when he came from the conference in company with Sir Peter Halket. Sir Peter's visage was very melancholy and not good for the regulars to see. The two of them ended their conversation close by me, and as I was there first there was no reason why I should plug my ears.

Sir Peter said: "I urged upon him to have every foot of the ground examined, and you heard what he replied; that he refused to lose time beating the forest for red Indians as Highland hunters beat the woods in driving out game. But, methinks, we could well take a lesson from these same Highland hunters."

"It will be a great fault if we do not seize the fords, at the least," said Colonel Washington. "Even were that done there will remain much danger. The French will never abandon Duquesne without making a fight. But we must have good courage. The French Indians do not want to fight. Out only danger will be in a panic seizing upon the regulars."

"You may dismiss that fear," Sir Peter haughtily replied. "His Majesty's Guards know their duty too well, thank God! If the provincials will hold, there need be no fear concerning the soldierly qualities of the Guards."

"I am convinced the provincials will hold, Sir Peter," crisply assured Colonel Washington.

Thereupon they parted with ceremonious bows, and Colonel Washington beheld me for the first time. He greeted me warmly, as an old friend. I had to tell him my experience as a guest of Captain Beaujeu, and he requested me to repeat what the captain had said about laying an ambush at the crossings. When I had finished, he said:

"It does look as if the Indians are failing him at the last moment. Our scouts report there are no signs of Indians at either crossing. There's nothing to hinder us seizing both fords now. And yet we should always beware of the enemy. Better overrate him than to underrate him. Well, Webster, take good care of yourself. If the impossible does happen, it must be the provincials who hold the enemy back until the regulars can get their bearings."

Again he shook my hand and his flesh was hot with fever. He was weak and his gaze wandered to his covered wagon. I blurted out to him, "You should be in bed, sir."

"Excellent advice, Doctor Brond, inasmuch as rest is hard come by when the wagon is in motion." His attempt at jocosity was rather pitiable.

When one saw the feverish flush in his thin cheeks and observed the heavy weariness of his eyes. "But it's worry, rather than fatigue, that's bothering me. Damn, Webster! It's hard faring when I can't keep on a horse when I believe I'm needed, but can ride across two counties without discomfort when a dance with a pretty lady is the objective."

I turned with him towards his wagon and he rested a hand on my shoulder, not for support but in simple friendliness, and I prompted, "You worry, Colonel?"

"The regulars," he replied in a low voice. "They have no idea what bush-fighting means." Then he caught himself and his voice was that of an officer as he warned, "But that isn't to be talked about. The riflemen will scout against a surprise." We were at the wagon and I would have liked to have given him a hand over the tail-board, but knew better.

Early that evening the word was passed that St. Clair was to push forward at once a strong force so as to make both fords secure. For some reason he abandoned this plan, which might have eliminated all chances of a massacre. Perhaps General Braddock opposed it, although I was afterward told by Captain Orme that Braddock never passed upon it.

Could we have but known that night what had gone on in Duquesne the entire history of this country might have read differently; always providing we had taken advantage of our knowledge. As it transpired later, the de Normanville brothers on July eighth reported to Beaujeu that our army was eighteen miles from the fort. Beaujeu at once, in a desperate mood, harangued the Indians. The red men told him he was mad to propose an attack on such an army. Yet such was his influence over them that they did not flatly refuse the venture but did ask a day in which to think over his bold project. Thus, this very night after I had spoken with Colonel Washington, the commandant at Duquesne was gloomily facing the hours that separated him from July ninth, the day he was to accomplish so much for France and leave a memory that was soon to be forgotten!

But he knew nothing of all this, and Sir John did not take steps to make the double crossing of the Monongahela safe. However, General Braddock did realize the necessity of doing in part what Sir Peter Halket had urged him to do thoroughly, and at three of the clock of the morning of the ninth sent Gage forward to secure the two crossings and to hold the farther shore of the second until the army should come up.

Round Paw and I were awake when this detachment started and we did not go back to sleep again. Cromit had found Simon Flax among the wagons and had joined his mess. At four o'clock in the morning St. Clair followed after Gage with the road-builders. Braddock posted four hundred men on the surrounding heights and started for the first crossing at six in the morning.

Round Paw and I acted as scouts, although it has been erroneously charged that Braddock had no scouts out. Such statements are absurd. The entire army, including the wagons and guns, made the first crossing without any hindrance; and it did seem as if the road to Duquesne was open before use. We marched in order of battle to the second ford, and saw nothing of the enemy. Gage had carried out his instructions, and the last crossing was clear and the prize was almost within our grasp.

A band of twenty of the enemy's Indians had been seen, but these had run away in fright. It lacked an hour before midday when we reached the second crossing, but it was not until two hours later that the banks were pronounced safe for the artillery and the wagons. In another hour the army had passed this ford.

Wild Creatures Able to Foretell Danger

In addition to the five senses human beings enjoy, it seems that animals and birds have one that enables them to divine a little of the future and what it holds for them.

The saying, "Rats will leave a sinking ship," indicates a strange foreknowledge on the part of these creatures.

Fish, birds, and animals are invariably true weather prophets. Sea-birds know in some curious way when a storm is approaching. Though the weather is fine and the sky gives no warning of a coming storm, they are moved by some common impulse to make their way inland. Wild geese will also fly from the approach of a thunderstorm.

Ants will desert their nests, taking

The Onondaga and I were in advance and halted to watch this final passage of the river. For the benefit of any French scouts the troops had been ordered on dress parade. It was a wonderful spectacle, and my heart beat high with pride. Round Paw sounded his "Yo-hah!" as he gazed on the soldiers wearing their best uniforms and carrying arms that shone like silver. To add to our enthusiasm, the colors were waving and the drums were rolling out the "Grenadiers' March."

As the disciplined files steadily approached, long lines of scarlet and gold, I could not believe the sturdy fellows ever would be thrown into confusion let Beaujeu act as cunningly and audaciously as he might. As they came on, it was easy to pronounce them inexorable of purpose, a relentless war machine that could not be stopped. That last passage of the river was the high point of my hopes: the Lilies over Duquesne were as good as down. In this brave and inspiring fashion was the bulk of the army drawn up in battle array near the Frazier cabin.

There would be no fight, I said to the Onondaga. He muttered:

"The man of the Wolves sees only red paint."

I remembered my promise to the Dinwiddie girl, and as there might be a skirmish between our rangers and the retreating enemy I went back to the wagons. She was waiting for me behind the covered wagon in which Colonel Washington had overtaken the army.

"We'll be in the fort before sunset," I hurriedly told her. "I must get back to be among those who go ahead."

"If I could go with you—"

"Remember your promise," I rebuked her. "I have come as I said I would. Now do you keep back with the wagons. There may be a few bullets flying about the head of the army. And just why did you want to see me, little woman?"

She flushed and then lost her color, and whispered:

"There is a shroud around the man Cromit. I wanted you to come back to see if one had grown about you."

She stared at me as if looking through me and at something far beyond; then she gave a little laugh and winked back the tears and in great relief murmured:

"You have no shroud. Thank the good God for that. The Onondaga—" "Put no shroud on him," I hastily interrupted. "For if you do, and he knows it, he would feel bound to get himself killed."

"I say nothing about the Indian. Kiss me, mister."

That kiss was most unreal, like something happening in a dream, and yet I found it greatly to my liking; a fact that surprised me much. She was so abrupt in her demand—it was more than an invitation—that I had obeyed and was hurrying back to the Onondaga before I had fully analyzed my emotions.

Round Paw spoke to me sharply, and I did not understand what he said. He trotted off and I followed him.

"My white brother is as one who has talked with ghosts," he told me over his shoulder.

The order of march from the second ford had the guides and engineers and six light horse following the scouts. Gage's detachment and the working party under St. Clair came next. Some distance behind these last came the line, preceded by light horse with four squads acting as flankers. Then followed the sailors and a subaltern proudly leading twenty grenadiers, one twelve-pounder supported by a company of grenadiers. The vanguard proper followed, and behind it came the artillery and wagon-trains, and the rear-guard. Flanking parties were out on both sides.

I saw nothing of Cromit and had time only to wave my hand to Busby before the Onondaga had led me around a bend in the road. At that time General Braddock with the main army was well back toward the ford, and the advance column of some three hundred men was well-advanced beyond a cross-ravine. Half-way between these two divisions was another column of two hundred men.

Had we scouted the ravine it would have been an easy matter for Gage's pioneers to have taken possession of it. Gage's command had passed beyond the spot where the main battle was soon to be fought and must have just finished ascending the second gentle slope when the Onondaga gave an explosive grunt, seized my arm, and pulled me behind some trees. I saw figures moving toward us from the direction of the fort, but supposing them to be some of the enemy's scouts reconnoitering the army.

BLOUSE AND SKIRT ENSEMBLES; COSTUME FOR TENNIS COURT

SO COMPLETELY has the ensemble idea taken possession in fashion's field, that even the separate skirt and blouse display a relationship. In this unifying of the costume color plays the stellar role.

Even though the blouse and skirt be in sharp contrast in answer to fashion's demand, yet through certain adroit trimming touches on the blouse which interwork the two colors the impression is given of a composite costume rather than a separate blouse and skirt.

The youthful costume in the picture demonstrates the idea to perfection. Here we have a navy skirt plaided with pinkish beige. The blouse is of beige satin crepe. The suede belt with embroidered beige patterning, the piping and the stitching on the tie repeat the navy of the skirt, thus vailing thought is that of a white crepe skirt, usually plaited, topped with a bright colored blouse. A very smart finish for the lightweight woolen or silk blouse is attained by hand-fringing the edges. Many of the better and newer modes are trimmed in this way.

According to the code of the tennis mode, the sleeveless frock must be a companion to the gay little jacket and the gay little jacket must be matched with a bandeau to hold mid-lady's vexatious growing "bob" in place.

Semi-tailored, sleeveless and styled with that simplicity which insures perfect freedom of movement, thus fashion would have the tennis frock.

Legions of attractive cotton weaves, delightful featherweight wools, especially challis and many novelty lin-bringing the costume into a unit. The ensemble theme is further featured in that the hat is of navy straw and the shoes navy kid, while the stockings match the beige of the blouse.

The wide brim of the hat is significant. It foretells a coming vogue. Not only will broad-brimmed hats be worn with summer picture frocks, but big brims are declared correct with softly styled street dresses for immediate wear.

The silk costume illustrated would be charming copied in gingham and handkerchief linen. Gingham is scheduled to enjoy a season of prestige in a style sense. One sees clever street ensembles made all of gingham, favorite modes featuring jacket and plaited skirt versions. For a pretty costume made after the model in the ens, are listed among media favored for the athletic woman's dress. If, however, one likes to play the game clad in silk, two of the highlighted materials are shantung and crepe, preferably in white, for all signs point to a "white season."

The dress simple in line and either white or monotone tint tells but part of the story. The real thrill comes in the little jacket of gay print or vivid coloring, which, as said before, is supposed to accompany each frock. The picture defines a fetching model. The one-piece dress is of white shantung. The jacket is of silk print in vivid gypsy colorings. The bandeau of the same silk is artfully twisted and tied about the head.

Blazer striped flannel jackets are also important in the sportswear mode, picture gingham in bold plaid patterning is suggested for the skirt. The blouse could be successfully reproduced in handkerchief linen or a heavier linen weave if preferred. However, handkerchief linen in exquisite colorings and very fine and sheer is very popular for the making of the blouse. The hemline at hipline and neckline and about the wrists should be piped with the gingham. A tie, also, and the belt of gingham would be effective.

Color contrast is emphasized throughout current fashions. If the frock is light then the coat or jacket is in dark tone or vice versa. A pre-as are also bright red, yellow or navy flannel jackets.

The little sleeveless white frock for tennis wear seems to have started the vogue which is now on for sleevelessness as a new feature of the daytime mode. The number of variations on the theme are endless, both in regard to materials and manner of styling.

An outstanding feature is the use of checks of every description, especially gingham, although rayon crepes are also numerous. Pique is likewise very fashionable, as well as striped silk broadcloth and various tub silks

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescriptional product.

The new village board was sworn in Wednesday night. The new mayor Harry Mall was seated, succeeding George J. Hacker who has served as mayor for many years. The board as now exists is as follows: Mayor, Harry Mall.

Trustees or aldermen, John Balaz, Richard Hensel, Edward Marti, O. E. McGovney, August Hentsch, Albert Braun.

Mrs. Bock sold the household furniture of her mother, the late Mrs. Anna Sutter last Tuesday. R. Hensel purchased the rear lot of the Sutter property.

Last year the village put in a string of 8 inch tiles back of the J. Frisch place to drain off the storm and drain water, but the tile have proved inadequate and are to be all torn up and 10 inch tile laid in their place.

How many property owners in Mokena know where their tiles empty into? It would be a good idea if every property owner would take the time and trouble to find out as to just where his drain tile goes.

Meet After

Twenty-eight Years

The past week the old saying that truth is stranger than fiction came true when an old time printer by the name of G. E. MacDonald of America, Texas called at the News-Bulletin office in quest of a job. He was recognized by Don Hall, also of the News-Bulletin force as one of the singers who was associated with his father's show company 28 years ago. Old times were brought back in memory by this meeting. Mr. MacDonald has traveled all over the United States and was delighted to meet with an old time friend. The world does not seem so big after all when friends paths cross like they did in this instance after so many years.

SIMPLE WAY TO KILL THE GERMS THAT BREED COLDS

The United States government in its research laboratories has discovered that in many instances colds can be cured thru the use of Chlorine Gas, when this gas is administered under the watchful eyes of a physician. The photo shows a group of chorus girls who have discovered that a mild form of Chlorine Gas can be made at home. This mild form of gas is made by pouring a generous dose of zomite into an earthen bowl, adding a pinch of bicarbonate of soda and placing bowl and contents on stove. When the mixture becomes hot inhale the gas that is thrown off, killing any germs that breed colds. They are shown inhaling the gas thrown off by the mixture after it has been heated, and their claim is that this treatment makes them immune against colds. (Herbert Photo, N. Y.)
